THE FUTURE

Oh, land of promise, dimly seen
Beyond the veil of time,
I would that I could see thy fields,
Could know what fruit the future yields,
The future, all sublime.

I would that I thy realm could see,
So vast, so great and grand!
I would behold that distant scene,
E'en now enwrapt in glorious sheen,
That grim, mysterious land.

Could I behold thy harvests all
And see thy gathered store,
Could I thy joys and beauties see,
And all thou hast in trust for me,
But once, I'd ask no more.

Oh, land of promise, now to thee
We look with hopeful eye;
We know not what is in thy train,
We guess not, for 'twould be in vain,
So we deign not to try.

Fling wide the gates of fancy, now,
We fain would learn thy lore!
Give us, we pray, one glimpse of thee,
We fain would now the future see
And what it hath in store.

Denison's First Million

N INSTITUTION with a million is already on the road to more millions, with a prospect of easier work in their acquisition. The achievement of the century-end in raising more than a quarter of a million for our Granville Schools is made more interesting and significant by a study of the conditions under which through seventy years of history the result has been attained, and under which Denison now exists.

It is a far cry from that first subscription list of seventy years ago when the largest subscriptions to the projected institution were three of five dollars each, and each of these five dollar subscriptions made by two generous souls clubbing together for the amount, down to this latest movement headed by a single subscription of $100,000 and including nearly a score ranging from $5000 to $25,000, yet the small sums contributed in that slender beginning meant much at the time, and were seed-gifts containing potentially all of the million that has followed. How far a small sum would go in those days may be understood from examination of an early prospectus of the college published in the Baptist Triennial Register for 1836, when the institution was less than five years old. The college year was divided into two terms of twenty-one weeks each, with vacations "from commencement, second Wednesday in August, six weeks," and "from the third Wednesday in February, four weeks." The expenses for the term of twenty-one weeks were for

"Board, washing, room, furniture and fuel, ... $27.00."

The institution at that time had a farm and shops, in accordance with the manual labor fad prevalent at that day among educational institutions, and students were expected to use four hours a day in manual labor both as a means of helping them to pay their very modest bills and for its disciplinary effect. A note added to the prospectus states that: "By a vote of the Board of Trustees any person will have the right to name the institution by paying the sum of $10,000, or a professorship by paying $5,000." But even this bargain-counter opportunity to win lasting fame was not taken up until after twenty years. These sums were not insignificant, however, for with the expense of living so slight as is indicated by the prospectus, and with investments readily yielding 12 per cent. interest, the sums mentioned were the equivalent of four or five times the same amount today, when living expenses are more than twice as great, and interest rates scarcely half as high. This is further shown from the fact that the present beautiful campus site, as first purchased in 1855, including thirty acres, cost but $1,938.16.

Yet Denison's million today seems a small endowment compared with the millions needed for a moderate equipment of certain institutions. But it needs only to be noted that a large part of the additional expense of these institutions is caused by their city location. The University of Chicago, for example, can invest a million dollars to secure its campus and then have one inferior to that of Denison. Buildings and other material equipments in a city are also likely, from one cause or another, to be more expensive than with us, and current expenses far greater. Then in the modern American attempt to do University work, although the term has almost no fixed significance, it involves usually the offering of a great variety of courses, professional, technological and otherwise, and gathers students of all grades of preparation and varying aims. This requires not only a multiplication of instructors but an increase of equipment in buildings, libraries, laboratories, shops, hospitals and the like, such that the income from a million dollars at present rates of interest goes but a short distance with such an institution, whereas it may make generous provision for one which restricts its aim chiefly to the courses of strictly collegiate work.

For long years Denison struggled on, after the manner of most schools, with little or no endowment. Tuition fees and gifts for immediate use were its dependence in those days. The year 1863 marks the first movement of importance for the raising of a respectable endowment and the sum attempted and attained at that time was $100,000. It is not improbable that his sum, raised during the days of civil war, although in times of depreciated currency, was the most difficult of achievement of any of the undertakings of the University.

And in that first attempt the splendid spirit witnessed in our latest achievement was seen; for the amount was raised with a generous margin, $102,640.36 in all. Additional building and endowment funds were added soon, making a total increase of $226,000 during the ten years of Dr. Samson Talbot's administration, 1863-73. Another one hundred thousand dollar fund was raised during Dr. Owen's administration in 1882-3, besides sporadic gifts throughout the years. Then came the generous offer of Dr. Shepardson, whose name honors our college for young women, to give the institution to the denomination in consideration of the raising of the sum of $100,000 for its equipment. The amount was raised and again, though not immediately, the result was the raising of a much larger sum, for the resources of Shepardson College have increased by $150,000 since the offer of Dr. Shepardson committed the institution to the denomination.

The decade of Dr. Purinton's administration has been marked by great enlargement of the institution's resources, but in the earlier part of the decade the enlargement largely took the form of material equipment; and a fine group of buildings graces the campus, the splendid Barney Science Hall with its twenty thousand dollars worth of apparatus; Doane Academy, which serves as an administration building, chapel and recitation hall; with the Dining Hall on the lower campus; and the Conservatory building and Recital Hall, are largely tributes to the energy and wise efficiency of our President. Additions to the endowment and scholarship funds amounting to $87,000 were also made early in this decade; and altogether, with the present splendid achievement, Dr. Purinton's administration has already seen the addition of nearly half a million dollars to the resources of Denison. Much of this achievement has been the result of direct personal effort of the President; and much more the result of the confidence and admiration inspired by his masterly administration, supported by one of the ablest boards of trustees possessed by any institution in America. The names of Thresher, Barney, Doane, Peters, Lewis, Colby, Canby and others are synonyms of strength and faithfulness.

The following is an approximately correct list of some of the principal gifts between 1863 and the undertaking of the present movement. Baptists in the city of Cleveland had given about $100,000, those of Cincinnati $77,270, and those of Dayton $225,000 or more. Of large personal gifts the late Ebenezer Thresher gave $61,557; the late E. E. Barney $82,725; Dr. W. H. Doane $50,200; Mr. J. D. Rockefeller $40,035; the late Henry Chisholm and his heirs $29,000;

Mr. E. J. Barney $42,900; the late W. P. Huffman $15,090; Mr. J. B. Thresher $17,900; the late J. M. Hoyt $15,300; Mr. E. M. Thresher $9,300; Mr. J. K. McIntyre $9,500; Mr. Albert Thresher $8,557; and Mr. Edward Canby, $7,000.

The history of the latest movement is in part familiar to many and in part so new and surprising that it is difficult to describe it with accuracy as yet, but the movement may be followed in its general outlines. It began, as have many similar movements, in the combined influence of the sentiment that the new century deserved to be signalized by some marked advance movement and of the hard fact that the decrease in interest from investments demanded a large increase of endowment-principal in order to meet even the present needs. The sum of $250,000 was fixed as the least amount to be attempted. A personal interview on the part of Dr. Purinton with Mr. John D. Rockefeller resulted in the offer of $100,000 from the latter on condition of the raising of the balance by Ohio Baptists before July 1, 1900. An extra $6,000 was added to the sum to be raised, an amount sufficient to meet the expenses of the campaign. The generous offer was accepted by the trustees and a committee appointed whose names were a pledge of success. They were: W. H. Doane and G. M. Peters, of Cincinnati; Edward Canby and E. M. Thresher, of Dayton; H. A. Sherwin, of Cleveland; C. T. Lewis, of Toledo, and D. Zollars, of Canton.

A remarkable and telling feature of the campaign was the selection of the Rev. Emory W. Hunt, of Toledo, and his release for six months by the Ashland Ave. Church, of Toledo, for the leadership of the enterprise. A campaign of education was organized with the two-fold purpose of raising the endowment and (what was considered even more important) bringing the Granville institutions into touch with the whole state as never before. To this end Mr. Hunt corresponded personally with the pastors or leading members of the 400 white Baptist churches of Ohio, securing in each church or association some interested representative of the movement; and then secured a hearing in each of the annual associational gatherings of the churches during the summer and early fall. In this and in the holding of "Denison Day" services in the principal churches of the state Mr. Hunt was assisted by Dr. Purinton and Rev. A. S. Carman, the Educational Secretary of the University, while many churches which could not be visited by them held such services on their own account. The literature of the movement consisted of the illustrated booklet "A College Course at Granville," of which thousands of copies were distributed, and four pamphlets "Baptists and Education in Ohio," by Dr. G. W. Lasher; "Our Granville Schools: What we have and What we need," by Dr. Purinton; "Why the Denominational College," by Rev. A. S. Carman; and "Our Educational Opportunity," by Rev. E. W. Hunt. These pamphlets, after a preliminary publication in the Journal and Messenger, were circulated to the number of about twenty thousand copies each. Mr. Hunt's conduct of this campaign has earned him the lasting gratitude of Denison and all Ohio Baptists.

The result of the campaign has been as was hoped, the awakening of Ohio Baptists to a knowledge of Granville and an interest in her schools surpassing anything which had previously existed. Then the contributions to the fund have been received from a wide instead of narrow constituency and the institution rests upon the basis of a broader constituency than ever before. Granville itself, although richer in almost everything else than in money, gave most nobly, from the contribution of the poor washer woman who gave five dollars out of her slender living, and the generous gift of twenty-five dollars from Ransom the barber, up to the gifts of hundreds from pastors, professors, merchants and citizens of all classes and beliefs. Granville contributed some $4,000 or more to the fund. And other towns and churches of no great means contributed sums not large in themselves yet aggregating about $13,000 altogether. Zanesville, Cambridge, Middletown, Springfield, Canton, Seville, Xenia, Norwalk, Elyria and other towns had a part in this result as did many smaller towns and churches. The Valley church in the country near Marietta contributed about $800.00.

Of the cities, Cincinnati responded generously in all of her churches, although the total can not be given. Mr. and Mrs. G. M. Peters contributed $6,000, and one of the last of Deacon R. A. Holden's generous gifts was his $5,000 check for the endowment. Toledo has done most generously, some fifteen thousand dollars evincing her interest in Granville. Mr. John T. Newton's $5,000 for library endowment and Mr. C. T. Lewis' $5,000 were the largest individual gifts from Toledo. Cleveland, though not fulfilling the hope of the Campaign Committee, has made at least two generous subscriptions, that of Mr. Swasey of a five thousand dollar telescope, which will give us perhaps the best instrument of the kind in the state, and Mr. Sherwin's $5,000, besides a number of smaller subscriptions. But it is, as always, Dayton, which has formed the body of the generous subscription list. When late in the campaign it was announced that Dayton had subscribed forty-five thousand dollars, it immediately brought the campaign within sight of victory. This sum was subsequently brought up to about eighty thousand, the largest offering as far as ascertained being that of Mr. Edward Canby, of $25,000, which brings his gifts to Denison nearly up to $32,000. The honored Thresher and Barney names, with those of Beaver, Chamberlin, McIntyre and Colby appear in generous gifts on the list. The gift of Deacon G. O. Griswold, of Warren, of $5,000 for scholarships, and an available legacy of $5,000 from the estate Mrs. Jane M. Harpster, of Harpster, are deserving of mention.

This magnificent addition to the resources of the University brings the equipment of the institution in property and endowment proper well beyond the million mark. It means the placing of the University beyond the fear of retrogression, and well along in a movement of positive advance. It means the provision of certain important material equipments, such as the observatory and fine telescope; the gymnasium and Y. M. C. A. building and the like; it means the strengthening of existing departments and the supply of needed additional instruction; and increased opportunities for students themselves in the additional scholarship funds provided. Not all of these benefits will perhaps be immediately available, as the many of the largest subscriptions are not fully due for five years; but it means an immediate cumulative addition to the efficiency of an already effective institution. At this writing, moreover, less than a year from the completion of the subscriptions fully one-half of the entire amount has been paid in, and visible results will soon appear.

FANNY FERN ADAMS, B. L., Philomathean.

Miss Adams claims the grandest state in the Union as her birthplace. She graduated from the Franklin High School, '97, and entered Shepardson the following fall. She has done valuable work in "Philo" and has been an efficient helper in the Y. W. C. A. She is a quiet, unostentatious yet thorough going student. Her favorite Prof. is "Willie."

WILLIAM HENRY BEYNON, B. A., Calliope.

"O'er him an even calm perpetual reigned."

Mr. Beynon is more widely known as the "Bishop of Welsh Hills." As an interpreter of the scriptures and as an expounder of the doctrines of the church, he is a recognized authority, acknowledged so even by Prof. Williams. Quite recently he has made investigations into the age and character of fossils and will undoubtedly soon become eminent in this line of work. Beynon represents the conservative element of the class.

REGINA COOK COWDRICK, B. L., Philomathean.

Miss Cowdrick's name is always connected with one of the greatest names in history—Napoleon—for Napoleon, Ohio, is her birthplace. From there, after graduation from High School, she came to Shepardson where she has since "persecuted" her studies. Aside from a few love affairs her life has been prosaic, but nevertheless successful. Her chief accomplishment is making lace.

ANGUS CHARLES DAVIS, B. S., B. Θ II., Franklin.

"A little man, but oh, how great when measured with his own eyes."

Davis is a politician by choice, but has recently retired from active service at the earnest solicitation of his friends. He is a hard worker, and has shown his ability as a leader in various lines. As a scientist ————. His ability as a pugilist is well known.

(See account of Hallowe'en proceedings.)

JAMES KEEP DEWEY, B. A., Φ. Γ. Δ.

"Independence now and independence forever."

Like his famous namesake, Dewey has become prominent in the last few years. He is a fighter and was one of the first members of the class to make himself felt. As an artist he has gained renown. Whenever anything startling occurs, everyone exclaims, with one accord, "Dewey did it!"

WILLIAM ASHMORE DAVIES, B. S., Franklin.

"And this man would be a lawyer."

Seeing the advantages to be gained by graduating with this class instead of the "naughty-naught" class, Davies very considerably left school for a year until we had caught up with him in our studies. He is the legal adviser of the class and draws up all resolutions, petitions, etc., in due legal form.

EDWIN G. GRANDSTAFF, B. S.

"A very gentle beast and of good conscience."

So very quiet and yet when he speaks all are attention. As a bi-metalist he was handled without gloves in Economics but was never knocked out completely. He can be found at all hours "prowling around his musty lab." Teddy is one of the quiet sort but yet he has some very decided opinions.

DAVID EDWARD GREEN, B. S., Calliope.

"Why conceal that which relieves distress."

For an all-round, up-to-date, energetic, imperturbable hustler and amateur photographer, David Edward cannot be excelled. If you wish anything done just tell him your troubles and he "will do the rest." He has some symptoms of that dangerous disease known as "my-heart-is-not-my-own," but we hope he may recover. But seriously (as Prexy says), "Uncle George" is a hard worker and will probably make an impression on "this mundane sphere."

CLARK BARROWS HATCH, B. A., $\Phi. \Gamma. \Delta.$

"Like a drum, noisy but empty."

Our friend Hatch is a well-meaning individual, good hearted and always ready for fun. In due season he will probably assume that air of seriousness which usually is a characteristic of an M. D. Just now the cares of life are not oppressing him. His favorite pastime is "smearing the profs"

WILSON AMMON HOLMES, B. A., Franklin.

"He would not, with peremptory tone,
Assert the nose upon his face his own."

"Daddy" Holmes is the patriarch of our flock. He has stood by us nobly through weal and woe and has at last guided us safely to the goal of our ambitions. At any rate Holmes is the first one of the class to secure a position for himself after he takes his diploma next June.

LIELA CLAIRE HOLCOMBE, B. L., $N. \Psi. \Delta.$, Philomathean.

Miss Holcombe comes from Corning, a town famous for its good coal and beautiful girls. After graduating from High School she came to Shepardson. Desiring to taste the joys of school life in the Sunny South, she left us for a year but finally returned to her "first love" and Shepardson. Her influence has been felt in all the organizations of which she has been a member.

PLATT ROCKWELL LAWTON, B. A., Franklin.

"Night after night he sat and bleared his eyes with books"

Lawton was formerly a "chaser" but has recently reformed. He perhaps wields more influence than any man in school and at the same time it is always for the best. And what more could be said of him than that he was the President of the Y. M. C. A.

OSCAR FRANK MOORE, B. S., Franklin.

"A preacher's son, yet not a rogue."

As a business man he is a decided success. The "Adytum" is a proof of his ability in that line. His favorite pastime is being pleasant to the young ladies, on whom he beams with his cherubic smile. A perfectly good-natured lad "as wise as a serpent yet as harmless as a dove."

HARRY ELLSWORTH ORSBORN, B. L.

"Young man, go West!"

Orsborn is all right, at least Orsborn and the wild and wooly Westerners, whom he exhorts from week to week, think so. Orsborn left us before we were very well acquainted with him but we prophesy for him a long life of usefulness in the First Baptist Church of Dead Man's Gulch, or wherever he may see fit to set up his ranch. Here's to the health of Orsborn and Orsborn's infant son!

ANNA MAY PATT, B. A., Euterpe.

Miss Patt began her life in the Badger State. Her education has not been of the regular routine form yet she expects, and justly, too, to carry away a B. A. degree from Denison this June. Her future prospects are very bright, and it is even hinted that before long she will change her name.

WILLIAM J. PEACOCK, B. L.

His "music hath charms to soothe the savage breast."

He sings. He plays the chapel organ. He helps Prexy crack jokes. He draws pictures for the Adytum and says they're all right. He scraps with "Dick" and slides down hill with the Sem. teachers. Behold, he has many and varied accomplishments, which he will be pleased to tell you if you call on him.

THOMAS CALVIN RILEY, B. A., Calliope.

"But still his tongue ran on; the less of thought it bore, the greater ease."

Only during the past year has Riley gained a reputation for oratory but in that brief time he has fully made up for his former silence. His voice has volume, oh yes. It is said that the Sem. girls petitioned him to cease practicing at night as he disturbed their slumbers.

CHARLES HARRISON STORMS, B. A., Franklin.

"Eternal smiles his emptiness betray."

Our worthy president. He has led captive all the girls who have been conquered by his winning smiles. He is "way up" in parliamentary rules. Upon his shoulders rests the dignity of the class and he feels his importance as he directs his subjects in an imperious manner.

JAMAN WARREN STRONG, B. A., Calliope.

"A solemn youth with sober phiz,
Who eats his grub and minds his biz."

Strong studies with a vengeance and under no consideration would he be induced to flunk. We are not great in numbers but the class of '01 is to be congratulated on having at least one Strong man on its roll.

PERCY LEONARD WILTSEE, B. A., Σ. X.

"He rushes in where angels fear to tread."

What more complimentary of a man could be said than that he is editor of the 1901 Adytum? Mr. Wiltsee has that very essential qualification to greatness — the ability and push to initiate an enterprise. Yea, it may be even said of him that he began that far-famed movement among Denison Seniors of allowing the upper lip to go unshorn. He has given us the news in that model modern newspaper, the "Denisonian." It may also be said to his credit that he is relentlessly opposed to scheming.

LAWRENCE ADELBERT WOOD, B. A., Calliope.

"He thinks too little and talks too much."

But nevertheless Wood enters into arguments on difficult points with all the profs. and never is defeated (so Wood thinks). His theories in Political Economy were striking and showed originality, if nothing else. He is one who is not afraid to express his opinions and in this quality excels the majority of the class.

MYRTLE IGNITIAN GIBSON, Ph. B., Euterpe.

Miss Gibson began her terrestrial career some years ago in the Buckeye State where she has been ever since. Her early education and high school training were received in her native town, Ironton. Her work in Denison has been of a very superior quality. She is at present a veritable encyclopedia of scientific information. In the month of roses she will receive her well-earned degree and diploma, but beyond that her future is a hidden mystery.

"THE JUNIORS"

(By A SOPH.)

The Junior boys are famous,
They're known both far and wide.
Just like the circus freaks,
By small boys deified.

ASHBROOK is a beauty, the finest of them,
But what a mistake he belongs in the Sem.
BEALL is lop-sided, left-handed and leary,
Cross-eyed and knock-kneed, and always acts queerly.
BROWNE is all legs, long and lean,
Look twice or he cannot be seen.
BURRER is short, as short as his purse,
He's lacking in wits, and that is far worse.
COLBY is the brother of "Heiney," the Soph.,
He has no qualities worth speaking of.
FAREL is a giant, far-famed for his feet,
His smile is childlike: the girls say it's sweet.
HUFFMAN for height is the choice of the lot,
He thinks he's a sport: it's all tommy rot.
RUFÉ JONES is a Jones: one of the many,
But speaking of brains, he doesn't have any.
FRANK LEWIS, the dude, is pretty in face,
He loves a sweet girl; her name is—in the catalogue.
GEORGE LEWIS, the baby, and pet of the class,
His right eye is blind; the left one is glass.
PERKINS, F. D., has a mouth full of mush,
If he had no moustache you could see him now blush.
PERKINS, N. J., was "bawn in the Souf,"
He's got "nigger brogue" in the tongue of his "mouf."
POWELL, W. F., was born deaf and dumb,
He's gained his sight, but his brain's still to come.
ROUDEBUSH is bashful and stumbles on his heels,
And eats with his knife when at his daily meals.
SAMPLE is a little boy, and well behaved beside,
He has a little wagon and a Billy goat to ride.
SMITH is of the tribe, you've heard of the name,
It's the best hold he has on glory and fame.
WISE is wise but in looks and in name—
But as he can't help it, he is not to blame.
FRANK READY WRIGHT is not right but wrong.
And so concludes this wonderful song.

The Junior boys are famous,
They're known both far and wide,
Just like the circus freaks,
By small boys deified.

"THAT JUNIOR LOVE AFFAIR."

The Class of 1903

VICT'RY perches on the banner
Of the class of nineteen three,
No defeat has come upon her,
May this her hist'ry ever be.

When we were Freshies bold,
And met the Sophs. in battle,
We rushed them down the hill
Like a herd of frightened cattle.

Our flag we rallied round
And tossed the Sophs away.
We fought them through the town
And surely won the day.

Upon the base ball field
We crossed our bats with them.
Don't talk about it now,
They hang their heads in shame.

Then we came unto the honor
Of our Sophomoric year,
And saw the Freshies tremble
When they felt that we were near.

The Freshies are a crowd
That has us two to one ;
But then you know that's needful
To make the contest fun.

They had a stick of wood and ribbon,
And showed it after chapel ;
Then raised a feeble yell
And challenged us to battle.

They hustled out the back door
And hurried down the hill.
We ran our best and caught them,
And laid them cold and still.

We piled them in the gutter,
They could not get away,
If 'twere not for the Juniors
They'd be there to this day.

But we have brain as well as brawn,
And hold high heads of honor,
We dug our way through "Freshmen A,"
And Greek's like pie for dinner.

Our president is bald, you know,
But hair and brains each other hate,
He's but a type of all the rest,
For as to brain we're all first rate.

Our blood-stained banner proudly waves,
And no disgrace upon it falls.
Long may she float, while from each throat
The class yell clearly calls -

Go whig, go whag!
Go jiggety jag!
Juggety gee!
Who are we?
Hoopla, Denison!

GRANVILLE, OHIO, Sept. 25, 1900.

MY VERY DEAR MAMMA:—

When shall I ever hold to your apron strings again? I want to come back home. No one treats me nice here. They say I don't amount to much because I am only a little insignificant Freshman. I'm sure I am better than a Prep. People here don't seem to appreciate me at all. Our class is the biggest in the school and there are some pretty girls in it, too. One of them smiled at me the other day but I did not notice her, as I remembered what you had always taught me.

One of our "profs" (that is what we call the teachers) is a great big wooly man with awful eyes and he scares us so! He talks about buying hogs and different kinds of dress goods and sometimes about love. His name is "Gil." He talked about "minus infinity" the other day and I asked him how much that was. He looked at me and then everybody laughed. I felt like crying, but I remembered I was "mamma's little man" and so I didn't.

"Dick" is another "prof." He has a loud voice. He reminds me of John, our hired man. On Monday mornings he tells us about the Sunday School lesson and then talks about the sermon. He helps me to be a good little boy. But I must tell you about our rush.

One morning we carried a cane down from chapel; a whole lot of mean boys came running and jumped on us. We fought them for a long time and then some one pulled them off. We were going to fight them again and would have licked them, too, but "Prexy" would not let us. "Gil" said we were green. "Dick" told us to do 'em up. We are all right anyway, but nobody appreciates us. I am so home sick. Let me come home.

Your little boy,

JOHNNY.

“MAN’S versatility is without limit; he can become accustomed to almost anything,” says Prexy’s book. “Life uniformly and readily adjusts itself to its environments.” But who has not seen strong natures who have seemed almost to control the very environing principle itself, whose very presence is magnetic, whose touch is filled with transforming power?

The true artist is not discouraged by scenes and surroundings uninviting to your eye and mine. To him the unhewn boulder but covers an angel waiting to be liberated. “The angel in his mind,” you suggest. He modestly says it’s in the rock.

Would you see a little of this idealistic mood or temperament shining, not in spite of difficulties merely, but fairly illuminating them? Then visit with me, or unannounced if you prefer, the attic studio above the dining hall. You climb an unpretentious stairway, make one abrupt turn and enter a door. There is another flight of stairs and as you look up, you see the beams and rafters of the present studio — a make-shift since the fire of a year ago. But you will be surprised and pleased when you look through the low room with its peaked roof. Its very beams and rods, under carefully arranged lights, with here and there a dainty touch — a study or poster, and many a water color or cast, seem like the work of an artist rather than crude supports for the roof, while every garret window lights a tiny individual studio. And the industry of the workers is but an echo to that of their capable little instructor, whose earnestness and patience are contagious and whose good taste and indulgence make a book like this one an artistic success.

A Kindergarten and Primary Department.

A KINDERGARTEN and Primary Department will be opened on the 17th of September, 1901, at Shepardson College, under the direction of a graduate of the Peabody Institute.

For those who desire it, the Musical Kindergarten, based on the Synthetic Method, will be offered. Children ranging from four to ten years of age will be received and thoroughly instructed in all pertaining to this method, with special arrangements for Freshmen and the chapel choir. One cannot too highly estimate the advantage of this musical atmosphere to the child. It creates an interest in and appreciation of music, refining and elevating in its tendencies. This method trains simultaneously both the fingers and the understanding, with a view to a solid foundation. Throughout the course little heads are required to think.

The course includes graceful movements, games to be played to rag time music and varied marching in which the child is taught to walk on his feet, thus acquiring a graceful, well poised automobile. Each child has separate instruction, and after three weeks, is required, when possible, to practice at home fifteen minutes a day. According to the aptitude of the child it may be required to practice thirty minutes at home. Little kindergarten songs are taught after the children have taken a course in breathing exercises. Little stories are told relating to the history of physical phenomena, storms, etc.

By the time the child's college career begins he is prepared to take a fall out of the Faculty.

For terms and other particulars call on or correspond with Professor J., Granville.

We may live without friends,
We may live without books ;
But civilized men cannot
Live without cooks.

IT is Saturday morning, and nearly time for the cooking lesson, and as the eventful hour draws near, visions of steaming dishes, and cooking utensils appear.

First the white apron, which alas, is not white, must be hunted for, behind doors, under window seats, and at last found crumpled and mussed. And, oh, do not forget your recipe book, with a pencil, which we hope has a good eraser, to change the startling statement — one teaspoonful of cayenne pepper, to something more moderate in quantity, as well as quality.

Finally, glancing at the clock, you conclude that you are very late, and have missed the privilege of choosing first, from a list of various dishes what you would especially like to make (if you can). So away you go and enter that spacious (?) apartment, the cooking school of Shepardson College, only to find you are the first arrival. And now you are subjected to a number of difficult questions, which you must not fail to answer. The following are examples: "How must you always cook potatoes?" And woe be unto you, if you give any other answer than: "In boiling salted H_2O ." Then comes a question impossible to answer, it is short and sweet: "What is food?" Thus it goes on until fortunately the entire class assembles.

As there are not enough chairs to go around, you sometimes have to perch yourself on a table or upon the window sill, and listen to a short preliminary lecture. But happily this does not last long, and soon each one is assigned a

"something" to cook. A general rush (which closely resembles the Sophomore-Freshman rush last fall) follows, and you are very fortunate if you secure a pan and a spoon to begin with. Everyone insists on having the salt, sugar, egg beater and the measuring cup, at the same time, and naturally, there is occasionally a little trouble. But as a usual thing the pupils behave in a respectable manner.

The great event of the morning is the arrival of the milkman. As he opens the door, he sniffs the air, probably wishing he might stay, and sets his bottles down amid pans and kettles. After this, things quiet down somewhat and everything and everyone waits until all the things sizzling on the stove, baking in the oven, and boiling in the kettle, are done, and ready to devour. What a sight to behold! One table holds a long row of tempting articles of food, and the other a high and mighty pile of dirty dishes, spoons and knives. But when it comes to the eating, another scramble ensues, and do not be alarmed if you have nothing better than a butcher knife to eat with, for you might have to use a toothpick. It really seems queer that you can eat so quickly, what takes so long a time to prepare.

After every thing in sight is disposed of, with many regrets that the menu is not more extensive, the pupils depart only to dream of and wish for the next cooking lesson.

Ode to the Heliotrope.

Little Flower! We love thy shrine,
There's no fragrance sweet as thine;
The only flower to Philo, dear—
'Tis the Heliotrope, sweet and clear.

Favored flower of Philo true,
Sparkling with the morning dew;
Long may thy sweet fragrance last
And bring fond memories of Philo's past.

Loveliest flower that ever grew,
Sweetest flower for Philo true,
Ever-blooming sweet and fair,
Sending perfume through the air.

"When we bid these halls adieu,
We will always think of you —"
As the emblem of Philo's hope,
Our cherished flower, the "Heliotrope." — M. R. S.

Philomathean History.

IN one of the rooms on the second floor of an unpretentious frame dormitory thirteen girls assembled on a certain Friday evening. The intent earnestness with which they moved and spoke showed at once that something of import was under consideration. As the thirteen original states little dreamed of the good that was to come from their joining themselves together under one common bond — so was it far from these thirteen girls to believe that they should send out such a wide-spread and lasting influence over the whole country.

It was with these girls and at this meeting in 1863 that the Philomathean Literary Society of Shepardson College had its birth. There was already one society in the school, and Dr. Stone, then President of the institution, very gladly welcomed and encouraged the new enterprise. Mrs. Leiter, now a prominent temperance worker, was chosen to be the first president. A week after the organization a fourteenth member was added, and so the society has grown and flourished. Meetings were held each week at which literary programs consisting of debates, essays and recitations were rendered by the members. Considerable friendly rivalry existed between the two societies, which acted as an effective stimulus for the production of the best possible work.

Not many years after the founding of the society, a room in the old college chapel was procured for a Philo hall. This room was the object of a great deal of careful thought and work, so that gradually were collected there trophies of the best and most fruitful years in its history. As time wore on the society gained members and lost them again, from year to year, as the girls went out into life, prepared for useful work by the struggles and the victories experienced for its welfare.

In the spring of 1900 the chapel building was burned, and with it all the material possessions of the society. The piano and all the furnishings of the room were lost as well as the records of the past years. In spite of discouragements the members have pushed ahead with their motto: "Sic iter ad astra," ever before them. All are looking forward, now, to the time, which it is hoped is not far off, when another hall, better even than the former one, may be secured.

Though the written records of the organization are lost, there still remain in the hearts of the loyal Philos living histories which fire cannot destroy.

The Euterpean Literary Society

AMONG the many time-honored institutions of Denison University, the Euterpean Literary Society for girls stands in a prominent position. Organized in eighteen hundred and sixty-one, she has maintained through all the varying fortunes which have fallen to her lot, her high standard erected by those first earnest members. Through the many and important changes that have affected the college since the foundation of the society, Euterpe has continued to grow in strength and power.

The aims of the society were, the development of the literary and musical talent of its members, and the advancement of the social life of the college. These aims she has always endeavored to further, and though great stress has been laid on the first, the development of literary ability, the last two have in no wise been neglected. From our society have been graduated many noble, true hearted women, whose names we are proud and happy to have upon our roll; and it is one of our greatest desires so to act that they may have no reason to be ashamed of their connection with our beloved society.

The history of the society, for the past year has been the history of many misfortunes successfully overcome. About a year ago, the "Old College Chapel," the building containing the society hall, was burned to the ground. Euterpe suffered the loss of her entire possessions, including all the records of the society except the old constitution. Since that time its meetings have been held alternately in the "Gym" and "Recital Hall." Despite being as it were homeless, there is nothing in the history of the past year, of which Euterpe need be ashamed. The literary and musical programs have been of unusual excellence. The Annual Extra consisting of a musicale was a brilliant success.

Having striven so worthily and so successfully under trying circumstances, we feel assured that Euterpe will not be found wanting when the hall so fondly hoped for, and dimly seen in the future, with all its accompanying opportunities shall be hers.

“E” ver upward “we” are climbing

Franklin

IT would be impossible in this short space to give any full account of the history and purpose of old Franklin. It suffices to say that our year's work, as we hope, would not make our patron saint ashamed of his namesake. While the year has brought forth no startling achievements of which to boast, yet we firmly believe that conscientious regularity and high standard of work are as truly indicative of substantial progress as the most brilliant results, which are always spasmodic at best.

The live interest displayed by the older members has been a source of inspiration to the new. The zeal and activity of the younger element has given encouragement to those who are older in the work. No unbiased auditor will deny that the productions thus far rendered are highly creditable to the society and the school. Interest in debating has been stimulated by frequent team debates. Extempore speaking has received special attention with gratifying results. Composition in all its phases has received suitable emphasis.

In conclusion, we can not forbear to give special praise and commendation to our officers, especially Presidents Davies and Davis, whose untiring and enthusiastic endeavors have done much to uphold and advance the high standing of the society in the University. The work done in the past year has laid a splendid foundation on which to raise up many years of unequalled success in the near future.

Calliopean Society

 ALLIOPE is one of the oldest literary societies in the West. It was chartered in 1836 and has ever since that time been doing literary work of a high standard of excellence. Among its loyal alumni are found many men of note. Calliope has sent forth her brave sons to be successful as doctors, lawyers, preachers, teachers, merchants and mechanics and in what ever capacity they were placed.

Our society has passed through all the changeful vicissitudes incident to the life of a college organization, and still holds the high place which her founders secured for her. This year it was a Calliopean that won the local oratorical contest and then took second place in the State Contest. Comparing this with the record of the preceding year, we see quite an improvement, and Calliope is justly proud of this record. Last June the society won the local contest.

Calliope is not behind her sister societies in sending out into the world each year some of her sons to take their places and responsibilities in life. This year is no exception.

“Ye gods and little fishes” !! Could the little fishes see this noble quartet, they would grow Strong in their might, lash about and make the water Riley, turn Green with envy, and take to the Wood(s) in their flight.

It is said that the present is the child of the past and that we are to judge the future in the light of the past and present. Applying these principles we predict a most glorious future for Calliope.

The Y. M. C. A.

THE Young Men's Christian Association is the one organization of the institution, in which the representatives of every class and clique of students come together on equal terms, and in a common brotherhood.

It is the organization which best indicates and develops the religious life of the student body. Each year it attempts to broaden its field of usefulness, so that it may best fulfill the purpose of the world-wide movement as expressed by the words on the sides of the triangle, the development of "Spirit, Mind, Body."

The association was organized in Denison in 1879, Geo. L. Hart being elected the first president. Probably if the pioneers in the work could return now, and make comparisons, they would rejoice to see that their small beginnings have developed into such a well-organized association, so far reaching in its influence.

During the past year a Lecture Course was inaugurated by the Association and the Reading-room continued. A number of social events were also tried for the first time. The Bible Study department enrolled nearly 130 men at the beginning of the year, and a very successful Mission Study Class has been maintained throughout the year.

The prospects for still greater development are brighter than ever before, inasmuch as a Y. M. C. A. building in the near future is almost a certainty. The much-needed gymnasium, Bible-class rooms, and baths will be heartily welcomed by the students and will add much to the attractions of Denison University.

Y. W. C. A. CABINET.

THE Association stands distinctively for the Christian activity of the college. It is the only religious organization in Shepardson, and as such endeavors to meet the spiritual need of each individual girl, to bring her to Christ, and to develop all into earnest Christian workers.

The policy of the Association as adopted in the Fall Term, 1900:

1. To make Christ real in the lives of Christian students.
2. To bring Christ to every girl in school who is not a Christian.
3. To make each devotional meeting tell for Christ by careful preparation, faithful attendance and tact in invitation.
4. To gain for the Association its rightful place as the center of the student's religious life.
5. To develop organized committee work adopted from experience of other associations and adapted to needs of the field.
6. To become intelligent in regard to all association work by correspondence, visitation, attendance of conferences, etc.

Scientific Association

THE above drawing is a reproduction of the diagram presented to the Scientific Association by the Permanent Secretary in an attempt to show that the Flagellata have not the power of reason. As the large audience (consisting of five Profs. and two students) had consigned all their worldly cares into the hands of Morpheus before the elucidator had reached the diagrammatic stage, this "Radiant of Animal Life" would never have been known to the world had it not been discovered by the janitor a month later.

The Radiant of Vegetable Life will be presented in the next Bulletin of the Scientific Laboratories of Denison University, which will be published as soon as the editor finds something to put in it.

The Social Culture Club and Otherwise

MOSTLY OTHERWISE

Culture Club The first meeting of this time-honored institution was held, well, we don't know when — even the Faculty are at a loss to account for its origin; but here it is, and here it is to stay, until Time, sage Time, shall wipe it off the face of the earth, and shall in its place establish a club which, although it may prove of great benefit to the youthful and maturing minds of our young, will never take the place of our Friday night Social Culture Club.

No especial secrecy is observed at its meetings, and if there were, we, out of our great desire for the well-being of the institution, would think it advisable, and feel it our duty, to enlighten the general public as regards some of the brilliant meetings which have been given under its auspices. It was the Social Culture Club which first witnessed the various kinds and degrees of stage-fright through which our honorable Senior Preps passed when they made their debuts into the frivolous society of a college.

Through the Social Culture Club we have been taught that we must not let a man take our arm on the street, nor must two go up the stairs together. We have learned all that can be told about calling cards, and, as for etiquette in general, we cannot be surpassed.

Otherwise The girls of King and Burton Halls, too, have learned that it is more blessed to receive than to give, and as a result, have given receptions and Hallow-e'ens. The girls have all learned the art of escorting a lady or gentleman to a lecture or concert, which they could probably do very well, if ever called upon.

Invitations have been received by the stronger sex, containing tickets which would admit the holders to art exhibitions. (We regret to say that the receiving of the invitations was as far as they ever got.)

The wedding, however, which occurred in Burton Hall recently, owes none of its royal grandeur and magnificence to the Culture Club. We just thought it out, and went through the whole performance, just as we would do were we binding ourselves to a man.

MOTTO — When we have a chance to speak, let no other person open his mouth.

The Denison Camera Club

President	D. E. GREEN
Secretary and Treasurer	H. H. WRIGHT

WE ARE a new organization. O, yes! Some of us fellows got together and thought we needed to make a new organization. There are not enough of them in school, you know. 'Twould be a pity to have the organization department of our University to run dry.

Well, after we got together and found out what our name was, we thought it was up to us to take some pictures. Photos, you know. O, we are pretty clever at taking pictures. We can take pictures of Granville in a fog even when there's no fog, also Granville by moonlight, taken when the sun is shining. One of our most astute members, our honored president, has a picture of Academy Dormitory with a jag on. The dormitory, not our president, you know.

Already we have acquired such prominence in our line that we have been asked to become the Photographic Section of the Denison Scientific Association. The secret of our greatness is our versatility. None of our members do the same thing in the same way. We are all specialists in a different line. For instance, Jones takes penny pictures that are worth a quarter in any market, simply as curios. Furthermore, one of our members will not take a person's picture unless that person is ugly. He says that in this way his finished product always looks more natural. Gentle reader, come around and let us take your picture.

The other day one of our esteemed professors from the hill came down and told us he had been reading up about photography, just to broaden his mind. We told him that was a worthy end in itself. He assented, and said that he had learned that red takes black in a picture, and that he would like to have his "phiz" taken to see how he would look with black hair, and whiskers ditto. Really! Would you believe it! It made such a change. He was almost good looking with black hair, that is, after we had retouched a few of the ragged edges, given him a photographic hair cut and whisker trim, as it were. This is simply a brief survey of our work.

H. H. WRIGHT.

The Eating Clubs

DINNER AT THE SEM.

AT last, there's that bell. I never was so glad to hear anything. I am fairly starved after that dreadful session with Prof. Gil." And then this emphatic maiden changed her belt-ribbon, smoothed her back hair and went over to the dining room, twelve minutes after the bell had rung. She found Miss Barker waiting, a very embodiment of patience; three minutes more of waiting until two girls came swinging in, looking as though they had all the time in the world, and perfectly unconscious that fifty-seven hungry girls were hurling mental anathemas at their heads. But at last the signal is given, the girls seated, the blessing asked and dinner proper begins.

Mercy, what a clamor! Sixty tongues going at once, and not in soft, subdued undertones either. Some of the girls tell of class rooms and their experiences of the morning, others, chronic grumblers, give their opinions of such weather, a few are "all tired and worn out," while at least eight or ten are discussing Carrie Nation and her latest exploits.

"Well, now, look here, she's doing just lots of good, see how she helps the W. C. T. U." "Do you call that helping? Why, she injures the cause all the time." "I don't believe any thing of the kind; it's all speculation, and you know that Prof. Colwell told us that was forbidden to everybody except to contributors to the endowment fund." "Oh, he didn't say that, but that gambling was perfectly dreadful, and speculation is all right till you get left out of a corner, and then it is wrong. It is not fair then." "I don't believe you know a thing he said about it. He told us that the only difference between the two was, that gambling is wrong and speculation is wicked." "Come, young ladies, shall we not change the subject?" "Yes, do; let's guess at the age of this beef. I'll start it at ten years, anybody bid higher?" "Now let me tell you," spoke one of the Zoology class, "if you will carefully examine the texture of the cord running through this corner, and then note the fine parallel streaks of rubber-like formation running through the piece on the platter, you will see that at least twelve years of rumination and cud-chewing have passed over the head of this beast." "And I'll tell you of another thing, by the exceeding thinness of the slices, the formation of the edges and the peculiar hardness and elasticity of this meat, it is evident that it existed before the pre-glacial period. I may be a little mixed in my dates, but I feel safe in saying that this animal saw the light of day at least twenty years ago." "We'll let you have it. But just look at that poor man at Miss Moore's table. They say that the only thing that has kept this pink wall paper from fading is his color. The reflection of his red, red blushes of embarrassment is as effective as a coat of paint." "Land, girls! Look at the pudding. You can always tell when the cook's mad by the deserts she sends us." "Why, aren't you ashamed?" said the Supreme Spouter of Moral Duties, "you should be thankful that you get your just deserts." "I'll wager that came from Prof. Williams. Come on; we're excused." And the girls file out, leaving the dining room in quiet.

UNION CLUB

OTTO — Eat, drink and joke, for we have flunked, do flunk and shall flunk.

The irrepressible spirit of jollity expressed by this motto rises superior to the despair of the Freshies over Gil's work, and of the Kids who are not used to Swipes' orations.

King Beynon, the last of the Welsh, rules in dignity, authority, and intellectual supremacy. Rilcy quotes Shakespeare, grows hair and waits for his diploma. Storms looks dignified and trys to handle his glasses like Prex. La Rue bears the burden of the sins of the club, having gotten a bad rep. as a joker. Dustheimer eats and grins. West tells of his Michigan experience, Dr. Chase, huckleberry pie, pretty girl and smiles. Howell belies his name, for never a howl is heard from him. Roger Jones is the pride of Father Beynon. Pa Whallon gets a second piece of pie while Onstott sings a certain well known song about affection for the landlady's daughter. Bollinger rings for more milk, and Carter says, "Me too." Geo. W. Lewis behaves for the rest of the club. Oxley is as quiet as a lamb, and visits his country cousin every other Sunday. Cook comes in on a late freight. Lewis and Byers are figuring on this problem: If Murphy eats half as much as he used to eat, and the total board bill is thereby reduced a half, and if there are twenty-four men in the club, how many times as much as the average eater, did Murphy used to eat? Odell moves for a cooler climate.

CENTRAL CLUB

LODGE No. 13, ANCIENT ORDER OF LUNCH GRABBERS.

ALL are assembled in the ante-room. As soon as the bell rings the triumphal entry commences. Lawton our housewife, asks "Grace" with a rag-time accompaniment from McGuffey, our respected Major from Tennessee. Just then Moodler, the man you can't see when his mouth is open, comes in, and Beall makes another of those appetizing puns which melt in your mouth. Perry, the man that wins victories, is the first one through, so large is the capacity of his mouth. Moore asks "Who has got some money for me?" which strikes terror to the hearts of the little ones, while Holmes and Cosby, whose hearts have been hardened by long life, get their grub. Nettleman with his famous Dutch smile, and Horace Wall, our married man, watch over their tables with benevolence. Gengnagel, after asking if there is any more meat, potatoes, bread, butter, pie or cream left at the other end of the table, fills his pockets with crackers and leaves the table empty and deserted.

THE MUTUAL CLUB

Ham, lamb, mutton chop,
Beef steak and slaw,
Mutual! Mutual!
Chaw! Chaw! Chaw!

The town clock has just struck twelve, and one by one, in rapid succession, the members of the far famed Mutual Club come in, with ravenous appetites, and anxiously await the summons to dinner.

With Olmstead at the piano, it is with difficulty that the tones of the silvery bell are heard, but with a rush each one tries to be at the table first. With many a joke as an appetizer the dinner is finished, and this is what they have had:

Ham, lamb, mutton chop,
Beef steak and slaw.

THE BETA CLUB

HIS club meets regularly three times a day in their hall on Elm and Mulberry streets. The meetings are generally called to order by the president or the chaplain when they are present. The president occasionally arrives at the first session on time. The first thing on the order of business is mastication (if there is anything to masticate). The second item of business worth mentioning is the critic's report, which resounds at odd times during the program. The critic occasionally takes a few minutes off, and the first assistant sonorously cries, "I warn you."

The meetings are conducted decorously and with very few interruptions. "Kibby" makes an attempt at a joke, once in a while, but all such efforts are discouraged. Deckman takes "Kibby's" place and tries to perform the same duties at the other end of the table. "Gaston" complains of the draft and frequently gives utterance to the expressive expression: "By Gad!" "Davey" dreams of the Sem. and its relations to the college on the hill, while the far-away look in the eyes of Perkins signifies that his thoughts are far away in Virginia or — Kansas. Frequent debates arise concerning the relative merits of Chicago, Norwalk, Buffalo, Batavia, Cincinnati and Newark, but no conclusions have as yet been reached.

When the table is bare, there is a hasty adjournment without regard for order. However, in spite of these interruptions, affairs move on smoothly, and they all think they have the most orderly club in town.

THE SIGS

MORNING, noon and night they may be seen coming to their meals from all directions like ships coming back to port to coal up. These ships have queer names: There is the Fred H. Hutson, a staunch Greek merchantman, which makes 22 knots an hour; the Percy L. Wiltsee, a big tramp schooner, which has just returned from a stormy passage on the sea of Purinton; the smart little tug, Mark Winchester, having in tow the Spanish yacht Frank C. Lewis, and the whaleback Eugene B. Huffman, both of which were found helpless in the Gulf of Herrick. The Frank B. Amos, a man-of-war, escorting the consort Joseph E. Green from the Island of Chamberlin; the excursion steamers, William H. Sproull and Henry R. Colby, both just able to pull in, the former from the Island of Tight, and the latter from a stormy voyage on the sea of Gilpatrick; the Thomas E. Dean, a derelict found in the Bay of

PHI GAMS

MEN with more ferocious appetites never gathered about a festive board than gathers at the Fiji Club three times each day (and sometimes four.) When Hatch has devoured everything within reach he winds up by "masticating the linen." His favorite dish is the plebian bean.

Roe Burt is the first man to be served—and the last to quit. He never opens his mouth except to ask for something. He dotes on peaches.

Flanagan is always late, but is none the less ravenous. He keeps Hatchy busy supplying him with salt and sugar. Lammy is insatiable, and is continually asking is there any more of this, that or the other. He is never wanting in fish stories or dreams of his the night before.

Each week Weiant's "hair stands on end like the quills of a fretful porcupine," as a result of Mrs. Mitchell's celebrated plum pudding dope. His capacity is enormous. Carhartt is given to such slang expressions as, "please pass the red-eye." "I'd like a little goo., please." His wants are few.

Waugh always looks pleasant and is getting fat. His favorite dish is porque. Woody, Red Jones, Luper and Dewey eat what is set before them and say nothing.

Mascots — John Lawrence Mitchell and his Maltese cat.

To illustrate its use as a refrigerant, potatoes, pieces of onion, orange and beef steak, a bunch of carnations, cranberries, a rubber ball and a tin dagger were brought into contact with it and were immediately frozen so that they could be broken to pieces.

LIQUID AIR

On Tuesday evening, March 13th, a large audience assembled to hear the much talked of lecture on Liquid Air.

Prof. Woodland's very successful tour through the West had led his friends to expect a treat, but the results surpassed their most sanguine anticipations.

Denison students justly feel proud of Prof. Woodland, as a young alumnus who has already achieved signal success in his chosen field.

From his first appearance on the platform until his departure, the interest of the audience was kept at a high level by the frequent bursts of appreciation of the striking effects.

Physical Culture in Shepardson

THE Physical Culture Department of our college is becoming one of its most prominent features, although the new building foretold last year has not been erected. During the summer, the authorities attempted to furnish a place for our work, and the result was a gymnasium in the old Conservatory building. We are thankful for small favors and will improve our present opportunities, still cherishing the hope that soon the sympathies of our friends will be aroused by our need and a gymnasium will adorn our campus.

Since the gym. does not accommodate many visitors while the girls are at work, we will give you a pen picture: It is time for a class. Miss Adkins looks anxiously out of the window and says: "I wonder why the girls are so late today?" They come in one by one, and presently a class of a dozen is at work, some with the chest weights, rowing machine and punching bag, others passing the basket ball or playing bell cycle. Tongues are busy all the while.

Miss Adkins: "Don't forget to register, girls."

Mae: "I've been dissecting cats in the lab. all afternoon."

"Miss Adkins, is this the way to row?"

"Sarah, what made you leave the physiology class today?"

Mary: "I'm tired of this; I'm going to slide down the rope awhile."

Adalaide: "Miss Adkins, I punched the bag two hundred times this afternoon."

"We girls cut German today."

Elizabeth: "Don't throw the ball so hard, I am afraid of it."

"Let me jump over the bar now. Girls, I jumped over yesterday with the bar thirty inches high."

"Don't it make you tired to swing on the rings so long?"

"Did the Profs. shorten the lessons on account of the lecture tonight? Prof. Johnson gave us four pages as usual."

"Oh, girls, don't you wish it was time to play basketball? Didn't we have lots of fun last year?"

"What good does bell cycle do any way, Miss Adkins?"

Miss Adkins: "Come, girls, let us have a wand drill now. Line up according to your height. Tomorrow when you come in we will have a game of curtain ball."

Book Seven

GRINDS

An Hour with "Prof. Willie"

CHAPEL is over, and Prof. Williams hurries to his recitation room with the important air of a railroad manager whose time is worth a hundred dollars a minute. He closes the windows with a bang that nearly dislocates the building, and rushes to his seat, puts on two pairs of spectacles, gives a prolonged grunt, pushes back in his chair, and — waits. After a while there is a sound of voices outside in the hall. A few minutes more and one head looks in, sees he is first, and retires to wait. Another looks in and — waits. Finally several honest looking young ladies appear, and then the class comes straggling in, talking, joking, reading newspapers and a very few studying the lesson assigned for a week ago.

"Bur-r-r-h!"

This is the sign to begin. We men on the front row obey. Nobody else seems to hear.

"Bur-r-h! Class come to order!"

Moore stalks in with an immense grin on his face. Closes the door, which immediately opens. Closes it again, seven times, finally with a terrific bang, and the class grins. The door opens again, and Green enters and repeats the banging performance. Professor rises hastily —

"Let me attend to that, Mr. Green." He locks the door and takes his seat.

"Well, let us begin, young" —

Somebody tries the door, rattles the knob and is about to kick a hole in it but Professor unlocks it.

"Ah, come in, Mr. Riley, we are having trouble with the door. I think I'll put a string on it." Professor turns suddenly —

"Mr. Hatch, you may begin. Stand up, sir! I will ask you some questions: Mr.—ah! — Mr.—ah! (Long pause while Prof. searches among his papers.

Meanwhile Hatch studies notes.) Mr.—ah!—Hatch! Can you tell me what were Milton's ideas about divorce?"

Hatch: "Yes, sir, he thought that if a man was married and his wife could not support"—

"Contrariety of temperament, sir! Now don't you forget that, Mr. Hatch."

Long pause — Professor works his head up and down to aid his reflective powers, suddenly starts in a loud tone —

"'I love to lose myself in a mystery, to pursue my reason to an O altitudo,' — who wrote that, Mr. Hatch?"

"Why — a — a" —

"CLASS!"

(Class responds vociferously) "Thomas Browne!"

"Sir-Thomas Browne. How do you spell it, Mr. Hatch?"

"B-r-o-w-n-e."

"That's right, sir. Now, don't you forget that, Mr. Hatch. Examination day's coming. That will do, Mr. Hatch; that will do."

Hatch sits down slowly, stretching his neck to see Professor mark his grade.

"Beynon!!" ——— No answer. "Mr. Strong, is Beynon there? Let's see, did I call the roll? Pay attention, please, to the roll-call: Beynon, Beynon! BEYNON!! Oh, yes; Mr. Beynon is not here." (Continues in thunder-clap tones). "Davis — Davi-e-e-e-s! D'wey! Green (a la crescendo accelerando) Hatch — Lawton — Moore, Peacock, Riley, Storms, Strong, Wiltsee — STRONG — ah! — absent, Wood!"

Professor's voice now becomes sweet and tender: "Miss Adams, Miss Baker, Miss Patt — Any of the ladies absent?"

"Let's see; where were we? Oh, yes; Moore, did you look up that quotation about Wycliff's ashes?"

"No, Professor; Beynon had that."

"Beynon! Absent — Does anyone know if Mr. Beynon has got back from the Welsh hills yet?"

(Silence.) "Mr. Riley, you may recite next. Can you tell me (brushes head with his hand very gently) what — a — whothelastofthetudorkings-was?"

"Henry VII."

"No, sir; Elizabeth." (Class laughs, Professor looks up in surprise.) "What are you laughing at? O, well, she was a king anyhow. (Dramatically):

Ladies and young gentlemen, let me tell you that it takes more than petticoats to make a king!" (Class laughs again. Professor rises excitedly.) "I mean to say that — ah — that Elizabeth was a masculine person. She could swear like a trooper. Why, once she boxed the ears of Essex. Oh, but she was imperious! (Professor begins his warning grin announcing the coming of a joke.) Mr. Holmes, did you ever nurse a baby?" (Class howls with delight.) "Well, now, never mind, class. That's all right. Elizabeth was just like a spoiled baby. You know the baby is a little tyrant. He makes everybody stand around. At night, when all is quiet and you are comfortably asleep, up starts such a howl that the whole family is awake in a minute." (Professor illustrates his words as he proceeds.) Then grandpa gets up and puts on his slippers, lights a lamp and goes down the cellar to get baby an apple. I tell you, young gentlemen" — (A bell rings down town at the livery stable. Wiltsee starts up with a hoarse whisper — "Fire, Professor!")

"Is that the fire bell? Class excused!"

Everybody makes a frantic rush for the door, and retreat with prolonged laughter.

From without comes a shout —

"What's the matter with Willie?"

"He's all right!"

"Who's all right?"

WILLIE!!

Prof. Herrick: "Mr. Lewis, what are the chief instincts of the animal?"

Lewis: "Muscular and nervous."

Prof. H.: "No, you don't mean what you say."

Lewis: "That's what the book says."

Prof. H.: "Now, for instance, what are your own instincts? — er, mundane — ah — you know?"

Prof. Williams: "Can any member of the class give me a verse from the Bible illustrating providence in nature?"

Davis (piously): "Blessed are the ravens, for they neither sew nor rip!"

A cunning detective named Beall,
To sinners made earnest appeal,
To turn and repent of their evil intent —
Lest Kibbie should force him to squeall.

At the concert — Hey, diddle diddle!
 A man with a fiddle
 Is playing a very fine tune.
 But Wilford and Mamie
 Don't care for the same-e,
 But sit in the back row and spoon.

Prof. Willie: "Miss Patt, you are deficient in paragraph structure. Do you expect to teach school?"

Miss Patt: "Er-no-Prof., I don't care to discuss my private affairs in public."

Miss Shambaugh: "To be a true, womanly woman is great."

Miss Bayless: "Her eyes are stars of glory, her lips are crimson bars."

STONE WALLS do not a prison make
 Nor iron bars a cage.
 Minds innocent and quiet take
 That for an hermitage.

But this stone wall a stair-way hides
 And in its welcome shade,
 Full many a time when coming home
 Has L—m s—n kissed a maid.

THE GLADIATOR.

VOL. 1.

GRANVILLE, OHIO, MAY 1, 1901.

NO. 1.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

We desire, in all modesty, and yet boldly, to declare our reasons for entering the arena. It is not for the love of gore or glory, but to be the champion of truth and the defender of the weak. Having long been trained in the handling of the net and dagger, by that prince of gladiators, Dr. C., we offer our services (if you have paid your subscription) as the avenger of your wrongs, the protector of your rights.

This paper believes in strict celibacy, yet offers its columns for the settlement of all pre- and post-matrimonial difficulties which have arisen through the marriage announced on the first pages of the ADYTUM. We even offer these columns for the use of students having similar difficulties. We call the attention of the public, however, to the delightful absence of that anomalous form of shark, the married student, found at present only in unusual and secluded holes of Denison fish pond.

It is learned on good authority that a fully equipped, tripple-expansion, earth-sweeping and sky-scraping engine is soon to be added to our plant. Yes, a gymnasium, Y. M. C. A. headquarters and observatory. We understand that the dirt from the cellar will be used in erecting a similar structure on the beautiful (?) campus at the foot of the hill.

Now, this combination seems a bit incongruous. We sincerely hope the "glass" will be placed by itself, quite away from the vibration of a gymnasium. We also insist that the gymnasium should be near the athletic field.

Ought not these buildings to be placed where they can be used? They certainly must not be thrown together, to save a few dollars on first cost. Nor should they be located on the hill merely for the sake of appearances.

Where is Shepardson's beautiful campus? The rocks and boards shall answer, where! It used to be beautiful. It is not so now. The hand of time, of fire, and yet more the hand of man have robbed these grounds of much of their natural loveliness.

How long shall these things be?

Shepardson needs a gymnasium as much as we do. And now is the time to get it. Let us not be selfish. Let's have ours in a good location and give her half. Or, better still, let's build two.

If you move without notifying us, we are not responsible that your paper still comes.

We call attention to our large circulation and to the desirability of advertising in our Want columns. The Preps and Faculty need not apply to this bureau — their wants are too numerous.

We take pleasure in opening a new department of information. All questions which we cannot answer will be referred to Powers or "Peter" Hines.

Recent Publications.

"Scenes From My Childhood Days on the Blackstone River," by R. S. Colwell, D. D., Ph. D. (?), LL. D. (?). In 5 vols., 16-1 mo. Introduction price, 75 cents for the complete set. Published by Hines and Nobody.

In this late work of the famous author

he has recounted his many exploits while still a youth, and has given many instances of his ready wit and repartee. His vivid and thrilling description of the cotton mill scene in the second volume is worth more than two or three times the price of the entire set. No well equipped library is without these books.

"Etiquette," by George F. McKibben, A. M. (or p. m.), author of "Property Rights," "The Duties of a Law Abiding Citizen," and "The Proper Observation of Hallowe'en." In pamphlet form. Price, 15 cents per gross. Printed by the University Press.

In this work the author traces out more completely his theories introduced in his recent works "Property Rights." This book is especially recommended to preparatory students, as in after life it will be of invaluable aid in settling disputes of all kinds in an amiable manner. We call special attention to the low price.

Frontispiece to "Property Rights."

THE GLADIATOR.

"Compilation of Democratic Statistics" (Illustrated by scenes from the class in American Politics), by W. H. Johnson, better known to the world as "Rough and Ready." Still in MSS. form. Not likely to be published.

The world will never know what it has missed if this unique and peculiar work is never published. The success of this writer on political subjects is too well known to need further comment here. Suffice it to say that this book contains the scheme by which it was known that W. J. Bryan was to be the next President of the United States of America, two months previous to the election.

"Is Marriage a Failure? A new light on an old subject," by C. B. White. (Required to be read by all students before receiving diplomas from Doane Academy.) Printed for free distribution—16,000 pages.

The charming way in which this old question is treated by the author will commend the book to all, young and old. There is a freshness about it that attracts and compels the reader to follow the argument from beginning to end.

"Hearts or Gizzards; or the Ideas of a Wide Awake Peripatetic," by J. L. Gilpatrick, Ph. D., author of "Do-'em-up in Horse Trading," "Select Notes for Sunday School Work," etc., etc., etc., etc.

For originality the title "Takes the Cake" (to use a favorite expression of the author.) The book adds to our knowledge of physiology as the author confidently asserts that from many observations and after much research he has found that "wherever there are hearts, gizzards are nearby."

"Chasing, or the Horror of a Book Agent's Career," by L. W. Smith, author of "How to Win Life's Battles," and "Reciprocity in the Book Business."

This book deals with personal experiences, and is full of advice to those contemplating the profession of a book agent. The experience of the author will be of benefit to beginners and the numerous anecdotes are of interest to all. Secure a copy and start fully prepared on life's journey. A striking quotation from this work is, "Leave conscience at home; it needs a rest."

With the hope of pleasing everyone, except the professors, we have undertaken to furnish you with a list of the more difficult examinations of the upper classes. You may rest assured that these questions will be given for the next twenty years, unless, indeed, some great calamity shall remove the authors of these historic documents.

We sincerely hope that our efforts will be productive of great peace of mind. And that you will hereafter be able to take at least twenty bucks a term with impunity:

English Literature

- I. Do I ever tell the same joke twice?
- II. Give outline of my notes on Wordsworth. Quote all the bright remarks.
- III. Did Walter Scott own any dogs?

THE GLADIATOR.

IV. Why do I always condense everything?

V. Tell the feather bed story on Goldsmith.

VI. Tell all you can about Princeton. Why didn't I go back there?

VII. Who might have written the Junias Papers?

VIII. Did you contribute to the turkey fund?

IX. Was Milton a Baptist?

X. How many pints of laudanum can a man drink in twenty-four hours?

Economics

FIRST DAY.

I. Am I professor of Economics?

II. How does it happen that I teach it?

III. Teach it pretty well?

SECOND DAY.

I. Was I born in Ohio?

II. What did my father do?

III. Do I ever talk politics?

THIRD DAY.

I. How often have I been in Europe?

II. What do I go for?

III. Describe the bread and staff scene.

LAST DAY.

What are my views of the tariff? Give fully.

Junior Physics

WINTER TERM.

This examination will be partly oral. Hence the order of questions may somewhat vary. Especially will this be likely if the Prof. oversleeps and has to run up Hill.—ED.

I. What methods for determining resistance?

II. How many watt-hours are consumed in finding a ground on the line? How many in finding the line down when the President has a reception? Discuss fully.

III. Outline the theory of electrolysis.

IV. What is the trouble with our storage battery?

V. Explain the different methods of charging empty bodies at this university?

VI. What is the highest voltage at which Jones was ever known to work with efficiency?

VII. Explain magnetic "lag." Suggest a method for overcoming.

VIII. What methods are now used to prevent sparking?

IX. Describe Pupin's invention.

Logic

I. Show fallacy in the following:

All Seniors are students.

No Juniors are Seniors.

No Juniors are all students.

II. Do you always laugh at the above joke? If so, the other questions are optional except the hardest one.

III. Who wrote the book we study? Where did he come from?

IV. Do all good people grow there? Where did I grow?

V. You know the color of my hair? Prove it.

VI. I never flunk anybody. I may flunk you. Draw your own conclusions.

THE GLADIATOR.

Calculus

I. Write all you know. Fill out the page with what I think you know.

II. What can I ask Hines and Odell that won't flunk them?

III. From that standpoint, what do you think of this standpoint? Now reverse the curve and differentiate.

IV. Why did I discard Olney?

V. Does Davis know as much as he thinks he does about this subject? (Negative answer required.)

VI. Find by the second rule the maximum and minimum grade this class ought to receive.

Explanation.—I am very much interested to have you get this examination. You young people don't know how interesting this study is. And how much you will miss it.

Mediaeval History

I. Give all the dates you can't think of.

II. Give the first sixteen chapters.

III. Do I know all there is to be known on this subject?

IV. Do I ever forget anything?

NOTE.—If you have not gone to sleep more than six times a week you will pass.—ED.

Wants, Lost, Etc.

Situations Wanted.—(Three line adds free to Seniors.) None but Seniors must apply, for they will certainly get positions, and the University will be ruined.—Prexy.

Situation wanted — As poet laureate under Edward VII of England.

Situation wanted — As hostler on Third street, Newark, O.—Hatch.

Situation wanted — Daddy Barnes' job, all except part of it. Can begin work at once, as have very light work at present.—L. W. Smith.

Situation wanted — As pole boy on a surveying party to lay out a route to Canada. Want to leave here about May 1.—Moore.

Situation wanted — As commencement orator.—Lawton.

Situation wanted — As pastor of the First Baptist church in Welsh Hills. Will stay until I get matrimonial matters arranged.—Beynon.

Situation wanted — On a short line to graduation which don't go through Prexytown.—Shepardson.

Situation wanted — Professorship of Cookery in D. U. Also fully equipped laboratories and a few more specimens of the man-creature to experiment on.—R. Colwell.

Situation wanted — As instructor of Philippinoes. Can give instruction in music and military science.—Green.

Lost

A wheel from my head. A chord from my music (?) box. A hinge from my gait.—Vance.

Lost — A witty remark.—Beall.

Lost — A full set of stale jokes.—C. L. W.

Lost — My grandma Benyon.—R. Jones.

Lost — My last friend.—Leslie.

Lost — My pocket-book, car ticket and temper, between Jones' hardware and S. C. Return to L. J.

Found

A first class, self-acting, self-announcing good opinion of himself. Owner must prove right by law.—O. E. Swartz.

Found — A chance to show off. All others are warned not to infringe on this right.—Conley.

Found — A peach.—Wilfred.

Found — One of Jones' '02 bright ideas.

Ye March of 1901

Tune—Old Kentucky Home.

O ye maids of 1901,
Come join us in our song
As we sing with happy hearts, light and free—
As we sing with pure delight
For the class that's "out of sight,"
For the class of 1901 — 1901 —

A few short years
We have known each other well
As classmates both loyal and true,
We have striven to be firm
In the things we've had to learn
In the class of 1901 — 1901 —

Fair lily is our ensign,
The flower with heart so pure,
Whose purity we hope to imbibe,
As we sing with power
Of the colors and the flower
Of the class of 1901 — 1901 —

We will choose the right
While we dwell within these walls,
Or when these our college ties are no more,
We will do our part,
With the watchword in each heart
Of the class of 1901 — 1901 —

CHORUS —

Weep no more dear Sophies,
O! weep no more, we pray —
Come sing with all your heart,
For you soon will have to part
With the class of 1901 — 1901 —

The Physical Examination of one of Denison's Soldier Boys

The examining physician with soldierly scowl,
Surveyed the recruit, looked as wise as an owl.
He tested the lungs with thumpings of chest;
Examined the eyes, found the sight of the best.
Clean limbed and well muscled at five feet nine,
Weight, a hundred and fifty, just in his prime.
With a strange little instrument the heart beat he sought.
What surprise and wonder on his face then was wrought:
"Young man, there's no heart in your body," he said;
"Here's life in a body that ought to be dead."
The youth spoke but faintly with tenderest smile —
"I did have a heart back a short while;
But now it's possessed by the lass I love best:
You'll find it at rest, well hid in her breast."

LITERARY

The Music Shop Under the Hill (The Conservatory)

1. Pinkety pang, pinkety pang!
Goes the Music-Shop under the hill:
Pinkety pang, pinkety pang!
Oh, the piano never is still!
Such banging
And clanging!
Such thumping and twanging
That often I wonder
If they hear it thunder,
At the Music-Shop under the hill.
2. SCRE-e-e-e, SCRE-e-e-e!
Goes the Music-Shop under the hill:
Oh, the old violin seldom is still!
Oft sweetly
And neatly:
Yet oft indistinctly —
My mind would get hazy;
I'd nearly go crazy,
In the Music-Shop under the hill.
3. LA-LA-LA-La, LA-LA-LA-La!
Goes the Music-Shop under the hill:
La-LA-LA-LA, La-LA-LA-LA!
Oh, the vocalists seldom are still!
Such screeching!
High reaching!
Pathetic! beseeching!
Such unearthly noises
And varying voices,
In the Music-Shop under the hill.
4. LA-LA-LA, SCRE-e-e, bang!
Goes the Music-Shop under the hill:
La-LA-LA, SC-R-E, pang!
Oh, the musicians never are still!
Such drilling,
Nigh killing! —
The music instilling:
But, one thing about it,
We can't do without it,
The Music-Shop under the hill.

“That Long White Cloak ”

The lecture hall is empty;
The youths and maidens fair
Homeward turn their slothful steps;
To lag they do not dare.

The campus looms before their gaze
Too near doth seem the goal;
It seems to tear her heart in twain,
To wrench his very soul.

They slowly pace the icy board,
Those last few moments sieze
To say a fond farewell—but then
The closing door he sees.

A quick adieu, a last fond glance,
He hears then, with a choke,
A voice within — “All here, but one,
Who wears a long white cloak.”

The next day to the ladies all
The teacher sadly spoke
And dwelt upon the “lady who
Had worn the long, white cloak.”

Now, there's a moral to this tale
For every class of folk —
Don't linger after lectures, and
Don't wear a long white cloak.

When Spring is Here

When spring is here

I know what we will do,
We'll take a book of poetry or two,
And seek on Mt. Parnassus, among the trees
A place where glints of sunlight haunt the breeze,
And what a happy hour we'll spend there, dear,
When spring is here!

When spring is here

We'll wander o'er the hills,
And greet the summer fields and flowers and rills;
We'll rest awhile and dream amidst the heather,
And watch the sun and your cigar burn out together.
And oh! how much I'll have to tell you, dear,
When spring is here!

When spring is here

You'll walk beneath the moon,
And serenade me with that same old tune
I used to love, last Fall, when it was new —
But I am sitting, thinking, thinking, dear,
And spring's not here.

— Selected.

The Bells

(After Poe.)

EAR the rattling of the bells,—

Alarm-clock bells!

What a world of work their melody fortells!
 How they tinkle, tinkle, tinkle,
 In the ears of sleepy wights,
 While the bed-clothes warm and welcome
 Make their music, very fell, come
 To our ears with no delight.
 Then we roll, roll, roll,
 In the trances of the soul,
 Into dream-land's soundest slumber,
 While no thoughts our minds encumber
 Of the failures and the flunks,
 While we slumber in our bunks,
 Heedless of the tinkling of the bells,
 Of the bells, bells, bells,
 Of the jingling and the tinkling of the bells.

EAR the tolling of the bells,—

College bells!

What a world of solemn thought their monody compels
 How evaporates our spunk
 As we think of this next "flunk!"
 At the melancholy menace of their tone!
 For every sound that floats,
 From the rust within their throats
 Is a groan.
 And the Green boys!—ah! the fiend boys,
 That dwell up there alone,
 And who tolling, tolling, tolling
 In that clanging monotone,
 Feel a glory in so rolling
 On the student heart a stone.
 Some night when they're asleep, boys,
 Let's upstairs slyly creep, boys,
 And abstract that doleful clapper
 And put it with the other
 At the bottom of the creek,
 Where it never more will speak,
 With its tolling and its rolling
 On the student heart a stone.

"A Miss is as Good as a Mile."

A TRUE saying as applied to many things, but never more than when applied to clothing. If it just misses a good fit or just misses being in good style, you will never be satisfied with it. That is why you always run a risk in ordering your clothing from a custom tailor. A slight mistake may be made in the cutting that will spoil the whole effect to you and yet cannot be remedied. You accept the suit because the tailor cannot afford to lose it, and you have a tender heart. Such a thing can't happen if you buy a
